Story Idea

About Tomorrow* Producer Has a Special Connection to His Audience

Steve Harris has a connection with the folks who use his product that few people could have, and no one would envy.

After Steve had started work on the CD about dealing with the pain of losing a loved one, his own wife Julie was diagnosed with a recurrence of cancer. The disease took Julie quickly and when Steve was finally able to come back to the project, two things happened: His personal experience gave him unique insights into the feelings of his interview subjects, and the interviews became a significant part of Steve's own recovery.

We think Steve's work with grieving people and his own perspective would be a compelling story for your readers. Rather than provide a pre-written piece that might not be relevant for your audience, Steve has agreed to make himself available for editors who would like to interview him and feature his story in their publication.

To get a sense of Steve's heart and the story he has, you can view a video produced for graduate students at Azusa Pacific University at: www.goCEC.com/comfort.

To arrange an interview with Steve or to ask questions about his story, we ask that you contact the number above.
